

Houston Center for Literacy's Days of Service

September 2017 – Hurricane Harvey swept through coastal Texas with an unexpected ferocity leaving unprecedented damage in its wake. Many families and individuals through the greater Houston-Harris County area were severely impacted by the storm, losing their homes, furniture, and personal items. As Houston strives to recover from the damages, our 75+ providers have been working hard to help impacted families get back on their feet by providing clothes, food, toiletries, necessities, and other services. The staff at Houston Center for Literacy volunteered to assist our providers' relief efforts through HCL's Days of Service from September 11 – September 22. We reached out to our providers and asked how we could help them serve their local communities. Each of our staff members participated at providers locations during the Days of Service to assist with our partners' relief efforts.

Through these difficult times, Houston Center for Literacy encourages Houstonians to stay safe and take advantage of their local resources to surmount the challenges brought about by Hurricane Harvey. We are #HoustonStrong.
